Office blaze

FIRE broke out at the Little Chef restaurant on the A10 at Cheshunt early on Wednesday morning. Firemen from Cheshunt put out the small fire in a rear office, which appears to have happened after a break-in.

NEARLY 30 branches of the British Legion along with pipe bands took to the streets on Sunday in a parade through the town. The event marked the dedication of the Legion's new standards — something which only takes place about every 25 years.

Waltham Forest Pipe Band were on hand to join the march from the British Legion headquarters in Brooker Road to the Abbey Church.

New flags were also on display when the organisation marched through the Abbey.

It went like a bomb

THERE was a rare chance to see inside Waltham Abbey's royal arms research establishment when it began its bicentenary celebrations at the weekend.

Employees, their families and guests were able to explore laboratories and other parts of the site.

Next month marks 200 years of nationalised explosives operations on the site which started life as John Walton's gunpowder mill.

From today, you'll spend a lot less time, and money, buying a suit.
